MRWED CEO joins Training Magazine board

Queensland entrepreneur and founder of MRWED Training and Assessment Marc Ratcliffe has been appointed to the Editorial Advisory Board of Training Magazine (USA).

It comes as Mr Ratcliffe was named as one of the world's Top 10 Young Trainers of the Year by the magazine.

MRWED provides global trainer training courses that are used by CEOs and human resource managers through to frontline managers and leading hands on the art of engaging and training others.

In the new role, Mr Ratcliffe will suggest topic ideas, serve as a resource for writers, identify story angles, and provide general feedback on Training Magazine editorial content.

"It is an honour to be included on this board and I look forward to making an important contribution to this publication over the next 12 months," Mr Ratcliffe said.

"It also recognises that the training being developed and delivered here in Australia is among the best in the world and setting the standard for others to follow.

"I'm passionate about training and my focus is on identifying ways to improve training to make it engaging, fun and flexible.

"The current global economic downturn has prompted growing demand for trainer training as organisations seek to better utilise their existing workforces.

"By improving internal training staff, organisations are able to mobilise their existing workforce in a much more powerful way."

Headquartered in South East Queensland, MRWED Training and Assessment is a private Australian Registered Training Organisation (RTO) specialising in trainer training. Established in the year 2000, MRWED has since trained more than 12,000 Australians in training and assessor qualifications.
